

Sales of single family homes decline substantially

CHICAGO (AP) — A national real estate group says single-family home sales dipped substantially in January for the first time since the nation's economic recovery began a year ago.

The National Association of Realtors also said the national median price of the single-family homes rose more than 9 per cent from January 1975 to January 1976.

The sales volume index, adjusted seasonally, dropped 15 points to 116 in January, the NAR said.

The data is based on reports submitted monthly to the NAR by about 140 board of realtors across the country.

But the dip may not be particularly meaningful, said H. Jackson Pontius, NAR executive vice president.

"Month-to-month changes may be irregular, particularly during the winter season when sales activity is generally slow," he said.

A proper analysis cannot be made until the February data is available, Pontius said, because it takes up to two months before cyclical movements in the sale of existing single-family homes are revealed.

The national median sales price of a single-family home increased 9.3 per cent—from $33,210 to $36,300—over the one-year period, the NAR said.

The highest median price of $42,170, a 15.6 per cent increase from January 1975, was recorded in the West, the NAR said. The Northeast median price rose 8.7 per cent to $40,650; the South 8.5 per cent to $35,400; and the North Central 7.6 per cent to $30,800.

Existing single-family homes with four or more bedrooms accounted for 26.3 per cent of January sales and sold at a median price of $50,540, the NAR said. Three-bedroom homes accounted for 54.8 per cent and sold at a median price of $35,920. Homes with two bedrooms or less accounted for 18.9 per cent and sold at a median price of $26,710.

The Florida victor

Jimmy Carter, former governor of Georgia, is mobbed by supporters in Orlando, Fla., after winning the Florida Democratic presidential primary. (AP Wirephoto)

Carter selling 'just plain folks' image

MARION, Ill. (AP) — Peanut farmer Jimmy Carter brought his just-plain-folks campaign for the presidency to small-town Southern Illinois. If, by the time he left, folks were thinking of him as just another "good old boy," it was no accident.

At an airport news conference and later at a Marion Civic Center speech Wednesday night, the former Georgia governor presented himself as an ever-smiling man of the people. Judging by the audience reaction, he went over smoothly.

"I grow the best seed peanuts in Georgia," a broadly grinning Carter told a Civic Center crowd of about 500. "And that's the way I make my living."

Apart from a farmer, Carter said, he is also a scientist, an engineer, a husband, a father and a Christian, and he tries to cultivate the best traits of each and apply them to his daily life.

He told the crowd of his formative years in Plains, Ga., where his parents were farmers, the children enjoyed the all-day gospel sings at the rural churches, adding that he was the first of his family to go to high school.

And he alluded to the dreams of early American settlers for a government founded on equality, openness and accountability.

"These dreams have not lately been realized," he said. But, he assured them, they can be. Despite Richard Nixon, Watergate and the like, he said, "Our system of government is still strong."

But, Carter added, "Our government ought to be just as good as we are." He said it isn't, contending that it has become a lying, secretive, unmanageable, bloated, overlapping and wasteful bureaucracy that isn't responsive to the people.

He attacked the present welfare law as "antiwork and anti-family," encouraging fathers to abandon their families so their wives and children may qualify for benefits and depriving persons of aid when they attempt to supplement their payments with income from part-time jobs.

"Our tax laws are a disgrace to the human race," he added. Carter said a man making a modest wage pays his income taxes but, "There are hidden, secret loopholes for everybody else."

President Ford's campaign was primed to roll into Illinois today while his opponent, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, stalked vote-rich Republican counties downstate.

Reagan declared Wednesday he has "no illusions" about winning the Illinois primary Tuesday and also said he was uninterested in the vice presidency.

Reagan's Illinois campaign manager, state Rep. Donald Totten, said he believes Reagan is gaining momentum in Illinois "so I don't know how fatal Florida was." He said a 40 per cent or better vote tally next week still is projected for the former California governor, despite the possible effects of the Florida loss.

Still, Reagan dropped plans for a weekend trip to California in favor of a final push to roll up a big percentage here.

Among Democrats, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter, the victor in Florida Tuesday, and Alabama Gov. George Wallace, courting the farm vote, crisscrossed the downstate media markets by plane.

Meanwhile, R. Sargent Shriver, without cash for television after weak showings in New England, found new life again as powerful Chicago ward leaders swung to him. He seemed to pin his hopes on a big vote from city regulars while Wallace and Carter worked the more volatile suburbs and downstate counties.

Former Oklahoma Sen. Fred Harris, the only other Democrat on the ballot, was missing from the fray after admitting he and his soldiers are "idling our motors" until he can raise money to mount a major effort in Pennsylvania in five weeks.

In Aurora, Reagan in a slip of the tongue referred to Ford as a Communist, quickly correcting himself to say he meant congressman.

Saying there were fundamental differences between he and Ford, Reagan said that "one of them has to do with governmental experience. Gerald Ford was a Communist, eh..." As the crowd roared with laughter, Reagan said: "Gerald Ford was a congressman. It must be a Freudian slip, they're (Communists) on my mind."

Shriver, failing in several bids for open support from the traditionally late-moving Mayor Richard J. Daley, won backing from ward leaders after declaring he would "run the country the way the mayor runs Chicago."

Shriver also told newsmen, while pumping hands in the Loop, that Carter beat Wallace in Florida because he and U.S. Rep. Morris K. Udall headed a plea from liberals to bow out of that battle.

"The fact is that Carter did well in Florida because U all and myself and others stayed out of Florida at the request of the liberal part of the Democratic party in Florida," Shriver said. "They wanted to have one candidate behind whom they could unite so they could beat Wallace in Florida."

Wallace, stopping in a cold rain at a downstate Champaign airport, his legs wrapped in an overcoat and an aide holding an umbrella over his wheelchair, quoted Shriver solemnly and declared, "With all the candidates ganging up on me in Florida, I did well."

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat quoted Wallace as telling reporters on his campaign plane Wednesday that "If I hadn't been in a wheelchair, I would have won in Florida."

Reagan, stumping heavily in Republican counties 50 miles south of Chicago, insisted that he will battle on despite losses to Ford in New Hampshire and Florida.

"Getting 48 per cent in New Hampshire and 47 per cent in Florida does not mean that you fold your tent and silently steal away," he said. Reagan added, though, that any hope of winning here Tuesday would be futile because "the party machinery" is against him.

Illinois Republican leaders, headed by former Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, back Ford, while Reagan's forces are led by U.S. Rep. Philip Crane and a handful of little-known state legislators.

Ford was set for a campaign swing that would take him to Rockford at the northern edge of the state Thursday and into Chicago Friday.

Carter, arriving at O'Hare International Airport from Florida for a three-day Illinois swing, said Wallace "never was a viable candidate." In Peoria he said only two contenders stand between himself and the Democratic nomination: Washington Sen. Henry M. Jackson and Arizona Rep. Morris K. Udall.

But then the grinning former Georgia governor declared, "There's no single candidate in a clear position to challenge me...I whipped George Wallace in Florida."

Carter said an Illinois win should supply the momentum he needs for a first-ballot victory at the Democratic National Convention.

In Urbana, Carter said, "The race next Tuesday is primarily between Jimmy Carter and Gov. Wallace. I'm not running an anti-Wallace campaign. He has a right to run. But I want to beat him."

Both Republicans and the four Democrats are running in the preferential, or "beauty contest," phase of the primary which nets the victor no delegate strength on the convention floor but can build his momentum and ease fund raising.

At stake in separate balloting are 155 delegates to the Democratic convention and 96 to the Republican. Few doubt that Daley, longing for a national comeback after his 1972 convention ouster, can snap up 59 delegates automatically from city districts. With help from party regulars downstate he ultimately could control about 100 floor votes.

His slates are committed to Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson, who has been deaf to broad hints from the mayor that he should run a favorite son campaign.

But the issue is clouded by the embittered gubernatorial battle between Daley-backed Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett and incumbent Daniel Walker, who is running slates committed to himself.

James Wall, Carter's Illinois chairman, says the fierce fight may "translate into the delegate races." He says his "political hunch is that we'll have to overcome the popular Stevenson name and perhaps the name of Walker which may become popular."

Wall, whose forces have targeted about 350 precincts they consider ripe, says it will be a "massive achievement" if Carter takes 25 delegates. Harris aides say they figure to win about 12, mostly in suburbs where Democrats are scarce but independent. Shriver, more concerned about his preferential tally, is running only 19 delegate candidates, all downstate. Wallace, with 124 delegates on the ballot, says he will "do well."

Knowledge of CIA efforts in Chile denied by Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon swears he did not know about CIA efforts to foment a military coup in Chile and that he approved "possible illegal" intelligence gathering techniques in the United States because they had been used by previous administrations.

Part of Nixon's statement, made in notarized written responses to questions posed by the Senate intelligence committee, differed from the panel's previously published finding that the former President personally ordered the CIA to organize a coup against Chilean Marxist Salvador Allende in 1970.

The statement was delivered to the committee today and at the same time was made public by Nixon's attorneys.

In response to the committee's questions, which were not made public, Nixon said: "I do not remember learning, while President, that the U.S. 'intercepted telephonic communications to, or from, the Israeli embassy,' but 'It is possible that at some time I may have learned...' The existence of these intercepts was first revealed publicly in 1972.

He authorized wiretaps on his brother Donald Nixon to determine if his brother "was the target of attempts by individuals to compromise him or myself." He also said he authorized wiretaps in connection with investigations of news leaks and the unauthorized distribution of secret documents to the Pentagon.

The documents case involved Navy Yeoman Charles E. Radford, who was suspected of passing the secret documents from the White House to the Pentagon. Radford was assistant to Rear Adm. Robert O. Welander, then liaison between the Pentagon and the White House.

In a sworn deposition filed in federal court on Wednesday, Nixon acknowledged that he authorized wiretaps of 17 newsmen and government officials but said that Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger was responsible for selecting those to be tapped.

The former President's deposition appeared to conflict with sworn testimony by Kissinger that it was Nixon who specifically authorized a tap to be placed on the home telephone of then National Security Council aide Morton Halperin.

Although he was aware of mail cover operations in which the CIA read the outside of letters to and from the Soviet Union and China, "I do not remember being informed that such mail covers included unauthorized mail openings."

Nixon indicated that former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman apparently had told investigators that he once informed Nixon that some of the information received by the White House was derived from mail openings. But the former President said "I do not recall John Ehrlichman ever informing me that he knew, or suspected, that some of the information in intelligence reports received by the White House was derived by means of mail opening."

—It is "quite likely" he was aware of electronic eavesdropping by the National Security Agency, but did not know that private cable companies were turning over copies of overseas telegrams to the government.

—He did not know about CIA or FBI break-ins and did not learn about the 1971 burglary of the offices of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist by the White House "plumbers" until 1973.

He authorized wiretaps on his brother Donald Nixon to determine if his brother "was the target of attempts by individuals to compromise him or myself." He also said he authorized wiretaps in connection with investigations of news leaks and the unauthorized distribution of secret documents to the Pentagon.

47 teachers get notices of possible job termination

Supt. of Schools Stanley Weber has given notice of possible job termination to 20 per cent of the district teaching staff.

"I have to keep the option open," Weber said today, referring to a school board directive to bring in a balanced budget. Notices were sent Wednesday to 47 non-tenure teachers indicating they may not be re-hired in the fall.

The action follows a revelation by Wilbur Stitzel Jr., assistant-superintendent, finance, who projected the district will be bankrupt in December 1977, having exceeded its $2.1-million debt limit.

Weber invited the affected teachers to a meeting today at 3:45 p.m. at South Central to explain the situation. Non-tenure teachers are those with one or two years teaching experience in the Dixon district.

Weber is attempting to trim $500,000 from the Educational Fund, 80 per cent of which is made up in salaries. Other categories within the fund are supplies and equipment, "but you can only cut so much there," Weber said.

The proposal to cut the teaching staff will be discussed at the school board meeting Wednesday.

Sunmark faces questions on Rochelle overpass

ROCHELLE— A meeting of citizens concerned about the proposed overpass was held Wednesday night with Darrell E. Sunmark, district engineer of the Department of Transportation, and Robert Boyd, federal district engineer from Springfield.

One of the first questions Sunmark was asked was, "Why doesn't the state build the overpass?" Sunmark replied that the overpass issue is of a short-capacity nature and that, with other state problems, the state now falls $300 million short of available funds, which come from motor-fuel taxes and taxes on the sale of tires and batteries.

Another question concerned why Rochelle is being asked to pay for the overpass, to which Sunmark replied that the city volunteered, and added, "If you pay for it all, we'll do it today. If the city comes up with the money to build it (the overpass), the project will increase in priority."

Sunmark estimated that if the referendum passes, the plans alone will cost $500,000. The plans will take four years, while the construction will require two years, he said.

He also projected that, by 1995, 18,000 vehicles will be going through Rochelle each day because U.S. 51 will remain a main feeder line.

Boyd added that Rochelle is geographically very well located, and said "It is a safe assumption... that Rochelle will see tremendous growth in the next 20 years."

On the point of the proposed utility tax which would pay for the overpass, some citizens expressed the opinion that it was unfair, since outsiders would also be using the overpass but they wouldn't have to pay for it.

Concerning the subject of putting a four-lane through town, Sunmark said that Rochelle was the aggressor on the issue. He said that plans for a four-lane would have to be included in the overall plan for the overpass. He also reminded those present that the Illinois Commerce Commission findings were based on the 1974 figures of $3.6 million for a four-lane and $2 million for a two-lane. The estimates for 1978 are $4.7 million and $2.6 million. The state will pay half the cost, Rochelle $1.6 million, and the railroads five per cent. Anything over that will be the responsibility of the state. The lanes would be 24 feet wide, with a four-foot median and four feet on either side.

More than 100 people were present at the meeting, including Rochelle Council members and city engineer, Ken Kedare.

Pseudo conservative group

The Palm Beach Post, March 7, 1976, main news item on front page was The New Right. Richard A. Viguerie is its godfather. Its aim is to replace the GOP. This socialistic newspaper does not inform its readers that Viguerie and his bosses want to lead the conservatives in the path of the Council of Foreign Relations.

They started a magazine called Conservative Digest, a flowery name with enough conservative sayings to mislead many conservatives. This group feels that the GOP will die a quick death if it loses this year's presidential election. They are scheming to bring this about. If Ronald Reagan should be elected President of the United States they know they cannot control him.

To hasten the end of the GOP they want to draw enough conservative votes to a new party, thus electing a Democrat to be President of the United States.

This group never mentions the American Party, led by Tom Anderson, who is a good American citizen working for the betterment of all the working classes in America. Four years ago they had an excellent party platform. Tom Anderson will not stand for any shenanigans and sticks to the United States Constitution. He believes it more important to elect congressmen who will stick to the American Party platform and principles.

This is why three-fourths of the newspapers in America will not give the American Party any backing. They are afraid if the American Party gains it will reverse socialism and give the people a good free-enterprise system to live under.

This Viguerie group has formed the conservative caucus. New Hampshire's governor Meldrim Thomson is its chairman. They did a slick job in getting this man to front for them. Howard Phillips is its national director and states he has no interest in supporting Ronald Reagan.

This Viguerie group appointed a committee to form a new Majority Party last year. It is chaired by William A. Rusher, publisher of William Buckley's National Review. William Buckley is a member of the Bilderbergers, a group in Europe to create a one-world government like the group in America, the Council of Foreign Relations.

Watch out for the above crowd who are trying to lead conservatives into a one-world trap. William Rusher wrote a book on how to form a new political party. He did not mention the many advantages of the American Party.

There are two very good conservative groups that are backing Ronald Reagan. They are the American Conservative Union and the Young Americans for Freedom. A splendid former editor, M. Stanton Evans, is now chairman of American Conservative Union. James C. Roberts, director of ACU, also backs Ronald Reagan.

Viguerie backed John Connally with $35,000 in New Hampshire, but only received 84 votes. This gives you an idea of what to expect if you get sucked in with this group.

Heritage issue is complimented

I want to compliment you on your Bicentennial issue. As I read it, I thought of all of the hours of work many people had put into compiling and printing it. I learned many things about the Rock River Valley communities. I enjoyed the first person reminiscences in particular.

My great-grandfather was one of those mentioned as an early settler of the Woosung area. My great-grandmother used to tell of her experiences. How I wish they had been recorded in a similar manner!

Now, back to the present. I wonder how not using the word "detente" will in any way eliminate its consequences. Ford has promised Floridians thousands of dollars for various projects. I find it hard to differentiate between that and the Lockheed bribes. As to the quote, "We are conducting our foreign policy with our eyes open, our guard up and our powder dry"—how I wish it were so but anyone who believes that would buy a pet rock.

Sincerely,
Frances Dempsey

Abortion comments

In your March 5th edition, the article appeared, "Women's Values in Confusion," written by Midge Decter and Erica Long. One of the questions answered by the two authors was, "Where do you stand on the abortion issue?" Have you even given it any thought as to where you stand? Do you realize what an abortion is? Webster's dictionary says an abortion is 1) a miscarriage; premature birth. 2) artificial inducement of a premature birth. Does this sound like a necessity to you? It sounds more like a murder to me. When does the fertilized egg become a fetus, when do you become pregnant? When you carry the unborn you are pregnant! The tiniest fetus is as molecule of water is water as much as the greatest ocean is water. When do hydrogen and oxygen become water, that's the same as asking when does a woman become pregnant? We must prevent birth before conception, not after. You see we must face the fact that human life of a special order is being taken. God is the Giver and Taker of life; will he allow us to mock him?

Do you realize the 3 requirements for an abortion?

1. That the baby is alive in the mother
2. The mother wants the baby

3. The doctor is willing to do the killing

For a mother to have freedom of a pregnancy does not justify killing an unborn child. Some women say they should have the right over her own body, her own body and another human's body are two separate things.

The rich and poor compared in the article is really unjustified. Does that mean anything and everything money buys is good? It might be true that a rich person can break a law and be safer than a poor one. A good example of the rich getting a safer illegal abortion than the poor, could be compared to rich buying all the heroin available; does that mean we should keep the poorer people supplied?

Are you allowing one age group of humans to be killed because they are burdensome? This isn't a catholic, jewish or protestant question but one of who lives or dies. How long will it be before other groups of persons will be defined as burdensome? Beware, senior citizens, crippled children, or minority races. This happened once in a country that had had special, moral and reverence for life goals. Remember, Germany? The first duty of the government is to protect your life, yet it can legalize the murder of many. The Nazis approved gas chambers to kill unwanted Jews, America approves abortion to kill the unwanted baby. Your tax dollars help support this. Take a stand to preserve life; write to your congressmen, state legislator, and support a human life amendment.

Praises board for giving YSB a grant

A good number of us in Lee County are grateful to members of the Lee County Board for the gracious and responsible manner in which they granted the appropriation for continued operation of the Lee County Youth Service Bureau. Without Lee County support, it is very doubtful that the YSB would be in operation after October 1976. Those Lee County matching funds had to come.

Lee County citizens owe much to the creative, skillful and sensitive staff of the YSB. Their kind of dedication, energy and competency is not prevalent. Their ability to find, train and use a large number of volunteers (who also deserve our thanks) is not easily matched. I believe the board members responded positively to the YSB's request because the staff presentation was highly credible.

It is impossible to measure the human benefits that have accrued since the YSB was begun. There are financial benefits which would surprise most of us. Citizens of Lee County will receive benefits from the $12,500 in Federal Revenue Funds far, far in excess of that amount. We are very fortunate to be able to depend upon the resources of the Lee County Youth Service Bureau.

Sincerely,
Tom W. Sheperd

"I can lick any bill in the House."

Nothing bumbling in Ford's strategy

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Candidate Ronald Reagan has thus far made perhaps the most serious campaign mistake possible. He's thrown all his marbles in the primary popularity contests—and let President Ford pick up the committed delegates.

And delegates are, of course, what secure the nomination at the national convention. Without them a candidate can win every primary and come in second.

What bothers Reagan's campaign managers is not the 51-49 per cent squeaker favoring Mr. Ford in New Hampshire but the fact that Mr. Ford took 17 out of the 21 delegates up for election. This means a good many people who voted for Reagan in the primary voted for Mr. Ford's delegates.

Now this indicates the New Hampshire voters wanted to protest via a Reagan vote while giving Mr. Ford their support for the nomination. Or it means Mr. Ford's campaign men quietly picked up the big names to run on their slate, names the voters chose over lesser-known figures representing the Reagan slate on the delegate ballots.

The Reagan men, convinced that Mr. Ford's big-name slate was what won the day for him in New Hampshire, are now out to cut their losses. While it's too late to change slates in some very important states, Reagan's strategists have begun a blitz campaign to convince voters that when they mark delegate slates, they're not voting for the men or women whose names appear on the ballots—but for Reagan or Ford.

The Reagan men may be barking up the wrong tree. My surveys of party primaries, caucuses, mass meetings and state and district conventions over the past 25 years indicate that most of the regulars who attend these party affairs know precisely what they're doing. If they vote for a Ford delegate they vote for him because they want Mr. Ford nominated. If they vote for a Reagan delegate they favor Reagan. They will of course send a certain number of men to the convention simply because they're congressmen, senators, or governor, or whatnot. And while this automatic vote for a few prominent men will have an effect on the delegate strength of the candidates, it doesn't account for lopsided victories in delegate selection.

Political analysts tell me presidential popularity primaries are largely opportunities for voters to let off steam against the establishment. But that however you slice it when a man votes for a delegate, he's voting for real.

Meanwhile, through all the fanfare of the primaries, Mr. Ford has been quietly picking up delegates here and there chosen through little-publicized caucuses and conventions.

The Ford men claim 17 out of 19 Hawaii delegates. The other two are uncommitted. They claim 53 per cent of 42 in Minnesota, to 36 per cent for Reagan and 11 per cent uncommitted. And they say they're ahead in 60 per cent of the Iowa races as of this writing. Reagan men say the Ford figures are somewhat high but don't deny the Ford gains.

This would indicate that in the few votes which have taken place to date, Mr. Ford's men, despite their well-publicized bumbling, have been able to get more of their people out than Mr. Reagan. We're speaking of such small numbers, we're not dealing necessarily with overall popularity.

Now there's a warning in order. The Republican convention will have 2,259 votes at Kansas City in August. A total of 1,130 or more will be needed to win the nomination. The number of delegates chosen to date therefore is not significant. The strategy is.

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
CASE G-428: Melody F., aged 18, is a new college coed. "Dr. Crane," she begged, "how can I improve my memory?"

"For I want to make at least a 'B' average this quarter, but I am not a very good student, for I can read a chapter in my textbook and still fail on the weekly exam covering it."

How Improve Memory
There is very little difference in the organic memory capacity of an average person vs. that of the memory experts who demonstrate on the stage. But those experts merely follow these simple rules:

(1) Get a clearcut original impression, as of the name of a stranger you are meeting or data on the textbook page.

Thus, if you are introduced, don't become so preoccupied with whether you are making a good impression or following the proper rules of Emily Post. Instead, extrovert your attention upon the stranger and if you don't hear his name clearly, ask to have it repeated.

(2) Then try to visualize the name, for this brings your eyes and your ears into action. And the more sense organs that are involved, the greater will be the ease of recalling the name.

(3) So write it down, too, to involve the muscular sense. Also, in this same regard, speak the name, but instead of merely saying, "Glad to meet you," use this acknowledgment: "Glad to meet you, Mr. Reagan."

Thus, you immediately put the new name (or textbook fact) into oral use. Extend this by quickly introducing the new person to at least three friends, as by saying:

"I'd like to have you meet Mr. Reagan."

If you repeat the name in your own introduction to Mr. Reagan and then turn to three companions to do likewise, that will make four quick muscular impressions and thereby more indelibly impress the name "Reagan" in your memory.

(4) Make bizarre mental pictures of the new name or data, so if you meet Mr. Ford, visualize him at the wheel of a Ford car.

For Sen. Goldwater, picture him at a river of molten gold or drinking a yellow liquid.

(5) And be sure you firmly INTEND to remember for INTENTION is as important as ATTENTION.

You may pass 50 street signs at least 1,000 times as you drive from your home to the center of your town, but still not be able to recite them in the correct order.

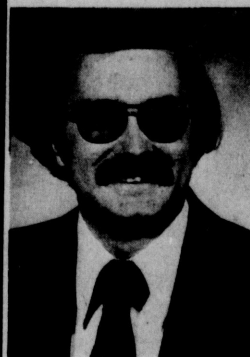

But if you sit down with the INTENTION of memorizing them, you can soon recite all 50 names, as you now do the 26 letters of the alphabet.

(6) Distribute your memorizing, for one recital daily for 30 days is much better than 30 repetitions on one day!

(7) Make quickie True-False exams as you read your textbook and then take your own quiz next morning before you reach class.

Send for my booklet "How To Study Efficiently And Improve Memory," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

(Always write to Dr. Crane, Hopkins Bldg., Melott, Indiana, 47958, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 25 cents to cover typing and printing costs, when you send for one of his booklets).

The Doctor Says:

Hemolytic anemia from any number of disorders

By LAWRENCE LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—What can you tell me about hemolytic anemia? What causes it and what are the cures? What harm does hemolytic anemia do to the body and what do you know about the life expectancy of one who has anemia if nothing is done? The doctor recommends removal of the spleen although an exploratory operation showed the spleen, lymph nodes and all organs to be normal. No cancer was found. Right now I am taking medicines daily. I am sure the doctor is convinced that the spleen must be removed.

DEAR READER—Hemolytic anemia covers an enormous number of disorders. The term means an anemia resulting from destruction of red blood cells. The cells can be destroyed from a reaction to a drug or because of abnormalities in the red blood cells or a variety of complex biochemical mechanisms that result in chemical actions that destroy them. It is not enough just to say that a person has a hemolytic anemia.

In all hemolytic anemias the life span of the red blood cells is decreased. Normally red blood cells live 120 days. As they are destroyed new ones are produced maintaining a constant balance of an adequate number. If red cell destruction is increased the bone marrow increases its production of cells to prevent an anemia.

With the increased destruction of red blood cells there is a release of excess pigment from hemoglobin in the red cells used to carry oxygen and carbon dioxide. The excess pigment is eliminated by the liver. When this mechanism fails, the pigment produces a mild yellow jaundice. This is sometimes called hemolytic jaundice.

The excess formation of pigment which must be processed by the liver may lead to mild or even severe liver disease. Gallstones from bile pigments may also form.

The symptoms of hemolytic anemia are usually those related to the anemia itself; weakness, pallor or mild jaundice. The important information necessary for diagnosis comes from laboratory work, specifically examination of the red blood cells themselves, what their tendency is to fragment and how many immature young forms of red cells are present in the blood. Liver functions also tell how the liver is coping with the problem.

Removal of the spleen is sometimes done as a form of treatment. Prior to making this decision, studies of how long the red cells last and how many of them are being destroyed within the spleen is sometimes done using radio isotope techniques.

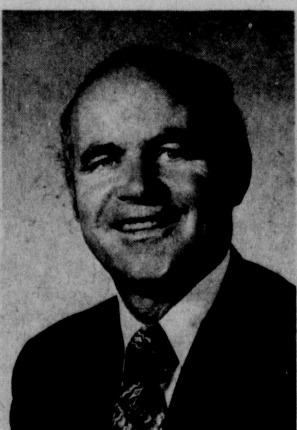

In many cases removal of the spleen will help to relieve symptoms even when the tests did not show that the spleen was a major factor.

I can't give you any solid answers on what to expect if you don't have a splenectomy. I can say that the management of most forms of hemolytic anemia today is rather good. You may have some inconveniences, but if you follow your doctor's advice and are kept under good medical supervision, the probabilities are that you can lead a fairly normal and productive life.

Dishrag handshake registers deadfish on meet-o-meter

Dear Miss Landers: Many years ago, I used to marvel at people's handshakes, particularly men's.

I met a great many top executives and every once in a while I'd get a dishrag handshake or a "dead fish" — no firmness or the feeling of "I'm glad to meet you."

Recently, it happened again. Does handshaking reveal anything of one's character? — Wondering

Dear Wondering: Character? No. But a handshake says a lot about a man's knowledge of how to present himself. Those dishrags and dead fish register minus ten on the meet-o-meters of "talent scouts" who are looking for a live wire to hire.

Dear Ann Landers: You are our last hope. Please print this letter. Thousands of families in Florida will bless you. I promise, if it shows up in the paper I will mail copies to several people and I'll bet hundreds of other Floridians will also clip copies and send them (anonymously, of course) to friends and relatives in the frozen North.

Dear Ones: We know it's cold where you are and it's lovely down here. If you come to visit us again this year will you please:

(1) Help out with the grocery bill.

(2) Remember I am not running a laundromat. When you wash your clothes, buy your own detergent, bleach, soap, etc.

(3) I don't expect you to do my housework, but please keep your own room in order. And it would be nice if you laundered your own sheets, pillowcases and towels.

(4) Don't expect us to entertain you. YOU are on vacation. WE aren't. If you want to eat at some nice restaurants, invite us. We'd love to go.

(5) Please — one family at a time. Don't bring your sister and her husband or your best friends — or anybody else, for that matter.

You always ask us why we don't ever visit you. Well, to be perfectly honest, we can't afford it. — Tired Of Being Broke

Dear Tired: Here's your letter and I hope it will make life easier for a lot of Floridians. I know from my mail that many of you can use some assistance.

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing this in my own miserable penmanship because I don't want to dictate it to my secretary. She is the problem.

I have read so many letters in your column from secretaries who have trouble with the boss because he can't keep his hands to himself. It's the other way around here. My secretary is always patting my cheek, smoothing down my hair, holding my hand a little too long when she gives me a pen for my signature. It's embarrassing. She is 28 years old, very attractive, knows this office from A to Z, and is extremely competent. I'd hate to think of breaking in another secretary. How can I get her to keep her hands off me? P.S. This has been going on for five years. — In Urgent Need Of Advice

Dear Boss: If it's been going on for five years the problem can't be so urgent. Kwik-chickiddin'.

Great play pulls six clubs

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Yesterday's hand is repeated today. Playing in five clubs, Arthur Robinson of Philadelphia was able to mark West with the king of clubs because his opening lead of the spade king marked East with either the ace or king of hearts. So Arthur dropped the singleton king and was sure to make his game contract. However, the game was duplicate and Arthur proceeded to make six. The play is worthy of note.

At trick three he led a club to dummy, then he ruffed a spade, led the jack of diamonds covered by king and ace, ruffed another spade and ran off all his trumps to leave himself with one diamond and three hearts.

West had to throw his ace of hearts to hold three diamonds and the spade queen. Now Arthur discarded dummy's last spade to leave it with three diamonds and a heart. East was down to hearts and diamonds. Finally, Arthur cashed dummy's high diamonds and led

Camisoles, tap pants are merry pair

NOSTALGIA continues rampant in fashion. Now it's the return of the camisole (left) with matching dance pants in Qiana nylon. Outfit is designed for Chevette-Miss Dior in an abstract daisy print with camisole to wear under sheer blouses or as a blouse itself. Lace edging of slip by Gossard (right) may be cut off without raveling to get desired length.

NEW YORK (NEA)— The old man would turn and say, "Okay, kid, you're on."

And Ruby Keeler would rush onstage in her little tap pant outfit and dazzle the house with her footwork.

Dance pants, tap pants, call them what you will. They're back.

If the truth be known, they're really an adaptation of the trunk-style panty worn by older, larger women who find elastic leg briefs too binding.

Those old trunks look the way they sound: completely utilitarian. Hardly so much as a tiny ribbon anywhere. And the colors match the mood.

Now, however, the mature trunk customer and the young girl who wants a fashion look can pick a pair of tap pants in a delicate print or soft solid, with a pretty border of lace on each leg.

And, for the bikini customer, there's a shorter version that edges toward the hip but still features the loose, lacy leg.

How do you wear them? Under a skirt in place of a petticoat, under culottes, pants and jumpsuits; beneath anything slinky to avoid lines. Choose them in satin, nylon or blends, from $4.25 and up, depending on the manufacturer.

Barring a wild fit of abandon at a party when you give in to the temptation to imitate Ruby Keeler, there's not much chance of the public at large catching sight of these attractive underlings.

But when it comes to their mates upstairs, that's another story. Lace-trimmed camisoles can stand a little baring and the custom is either to leave some buttons undone so that part of the bodice can be seen or to allow for insight through a sheer shirt or blouse.

Those camisoles made with molded bodices and stretch straps suit the customer who doesn't want to wear a bra but needs some protection against a scratchy sweater.

And, because the camisole reaches only to the hip, it works with a lined skirt over a pair of dance pants, without creating uncomfortable bulk. They retail from approximately $6.

If that isn't enough variety for you, there's one more way to wear dance pants and camisoles. To bed, as nightclothes. And visions by Busby Berkeley will dance in your head.

Pardon my 'dress liner'?

By ELLIE GROSSMAN

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Now, if we all stick together, maybe we can lick this thing. Surely, you know what a slip is. Even if you've never worn one or its half-sister, the petticoat, some older female in the family has one or two tucked in her dresser drawers.

They go under skirts and dresses and used to be considered alluring in their own way. There was always one scene where the hero called unannounced on the sultry, blonde suspect. And she'd answer the door in her provocative, black slip.

Along came pants and unisex dressing and skirts and dresses were packed off to that great closet in the sky.

They were out there all the time waiting to return. Now that they have, in every conceivable length, intimate apparel people are quite logically promoting the proposition that you need something under them. Only they're refusing to call them slips.

"Dress liners," that's the new handle. "Slips," they reason, were those things women wore before the flood. The young customer has to be gently, carefully introduced to these new, sleek, clingless garments that are cut for both the full and semi-full dress silhouettes.

Very neat and modern they are, with no fussy lacework to show under formfitting dresses. Some even have molded, stretch bodices that eliminate the need for a bra.

So much for the full slip. With hems ranging in length anywhere from mid-knee to two inches below, to mid-calf and ankle, you need a wardrobe of lingerie. Assuming, that is, that you can and want to wear each length.

Well, a wardrobe of petticoats is there if you want it. Flared, straight, gored, slit on the side or up the middle, with or without elastic inserts at the waist and reaching to any and all lengths.

But if you want to circumvent all that, at least two intimate apparel firms have come up with the answer. Say you put on your new chiffon cocktail dress and, lo and behold, your slip is an inch too long. If it's an "as you like it" slip by Gossard, just grab your scissors and cut off a couple of inches. The slip won't unravel — it's meant to be cut and the hem is composed of three, two-inch panels that can be snipped according to desired length.

For the itchy fingered, Gossard also makes "as you like it" pant liners and petticoats.

With its "clip-it" petticoat, Kayser-Roth offers three, one-inch hems that can be cut to 23, 24 or 25-inch. And a long "clip-it" petticoat that shortens from 39 to 38 or 37 inches for the tall customer.

What of the woman with the unsteady hand, who cuts too much off her play-slip? Or whose five-year-old gets to it before she does? Ah, the manufacturers beam, then she runs right out and buys another cutaway slip.

They're clever, these intimate apparel folk. (Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

The Nachusa Chapter of Questers met recently in the home of Mrs. Joe Hicks with 12 members present.

During the meeting, a nominating committee named: Mrs. John Bothe, Mrs. Bud Wilson and Mrs. Russell Metz. It was announced that the district meeting is set for May 19 at St. Charles.

Mrs. Hicks gave the program for the evening on "Customs Around Rings." Ring adornment has been popular since earliest times, said Mrs. Hicks. Orientals used to wear them on their toes, she added.

"The custom of wearing a wedding ring on the third finger of the left hand dates back to the Egyptians' belief that there was a specific vein running from the third finger of the left hand directly to the heart; the heart considered to be the center of one's emotions.

"Since rings have no beginning or end," said Mrs. Hicks, "they symbolize eternity and because gold metal signifies fidelity, the custom of engagement and wedding rings continues."

1776 AMERICAN BICENTENNIAL 1976

(Copyright 1975 American Antiquarian Society)

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the 48th in a series of articles on the American Revolution for the Bicentennial year prepared by the American Antiquarian Society in cooperation with the American Newspaper Publishers Association Foundation.

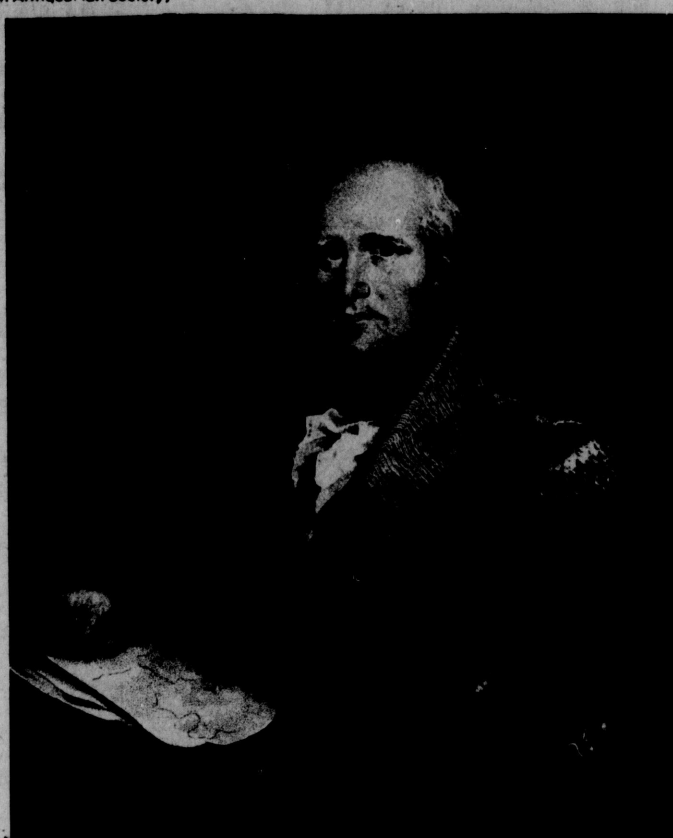

By DR. FRANCIS G. WALETT
Early in 1778 western Indians, encouraged by the British, carried out a number of devastating raids into the Ohio, Illinois, and Kentucky country. Col. Henry Hamilton, the British governor of Detroit, was known as the "Hair-Buyer" because of his eagerness to purchase white scalps.

The British were trying to hold on to this vast western region, which they had controlled since the French and Indian War; but eastern states also had claims, based on colonial charters, to the region. With Indian parties attacking outlying settlements and the British fastening their hold on the area, something had to be done.

After several American military efforts to gain control of the Ohio country and to take Detroit had failed, a famous frontier fighter came on the scene and won lasting fame as an heroic figure in the struggle for the west.

George Rogers Clark, born near Charlottesville, Va., was a tall, red-headed, and hardy frontiersman. Although only 23 years old when the American Revolution began, he was already an experienced Indian fighter familiar with the western lands. In 1777 Clark conceived the bold plan of seizing the old French villages in southern Illinois and Indiana (Kaskaskia, Cahokia, and Vincennes), which were now in British hands.

Late that year Clark went to Williamsburg, Va., where he got Thomas Jefferson, Richard Henry Lee, and George Mason to agree to his plan. Soon Gov. Patrick Henry persuaded the Virginia assembly to support an expedition, provide funds and authorize Clark to raise forces.

The stated purpose of the mission was to defend Kentucky; but the secret intent was to take Kaskaskia, other posts and, if possible, Detroit itself. Thus George Rogers Clark undertook a campaign to save the northwest. It is significant to note that his authority and support came from Virginia (which had claims to western land) and not from the Continental Congress.

Although he had some trouble raising men, Clark finally started down the Ohio with about 175 troops. Hiding their boats about 10 miles below the mouth of the Tennessee River, the party marched northwest through the forest toward Kaskaskia. By July 4 Clark and his men had crossed southern Illinois to a point near Kaskaskia on the eastern side of the Mississippi River.

Without firing a shot the Americans captured the virtually undefended town. Presently, Cahokia, a few miles to the north was occupied; and in August 1778 a force was sent to take possession of Vincennes. Clark then organized the whole region as the county of Illinois within the state of Virginia. Proudly he wrote home about his conquests, and the newspapers reported these victories.

The west had not yet been won, however. Governor Hamilton still had some fight in him, and at the head of a force of about 500 whites and Indians, he retook Vincennes without opposition. He had plans to seize other posts in the territory, too.

Clark learned about the fall of Vincennes while at Kaskaskia. He strengthened that fort and immediately set about raising a force to move against the British. By promises and threats he got about 200 men, half of them French, to march for Vincennes, Feb. 6, 1779.

It was a dreadful ordeal, struggling in the middle of winter across 170 miles of rain-soaked flooded country. Still worse, an early thaw made the crossing of several rivers very dangerous. Since game had been driven off by high water, the men were on starvation rations. Clark wrote to his friend, George Mason, that the conditions they faced were almost "too incredible for any Person to believe."

Yet he kept them going, even though they had to wade through shoulder-high icy water at times. When they finally got to high ground near Vincennes the men were ready to collapse.

Colonel Hamilton was hardly ready for an attack; not expecting that he would need them so soon, he had let about one-half of his militia go home; and now many of his Indian allies fled. The British commander refused Clark's demand that he surrender immediately, however. At this point the hard-headed Clark took five captured Indians, tomahawked them in full view of the garrison and threw their bodies into the river. After this gruesome bit of showmanship by the enemy, Hamilton decided to give in.

Without question George Rogers Clark's forced march under most difficult conditions to retake Vincennes was a remarkable feat. He described it fully in private letters and in a journal published many years later. A shorter account of the expedition appeared in Dixon and Hunter's Virginia Gazette for June 26, 1779.

Vincennes and the other principal posts in the west remained in American hands for the rest of the war. Hamilton was taken to Williamsburg under heavy guard; although he escaped frontier vengeance, the "Hair-Buyer" remained in prison in Virginia for many months.

Clark wanted desperately to capture Detroit, but could not do so. While his capture of Kaskaskia and Vincennes turned out to be permanent, it did not stop Tory and Indian raids into the Ohio country and Kentucky. The Shawnee and Delaware in particular made numerous savage assaults on the frontier during the late stages of the war.

If Clark's exploits did not end fighting and bring peace dramatically to the west, they did establish firm footholds in this country for the United States. Without them the British and Indians would probably have pushed the frontier of white settlement much farther to the East. These conquests too unquestionably influenced the cession of the huge territory to the United States at the end of the American Revolution.

George Rogers Clark, however rough and harsh at times, did much to establish American power in the turbulent Ohio country; and he will always be remembered in history and legend as the greatest hero of the American Revolution in the West.

Top 40 list narrows for stations

By STEPHEN FORD
NEW YORK (NEA)— Since metropolitan AM radio stations already restrict themselves to playlists more contained than the testimony of a CIA spook before a Senate committee, record companies were not amused to learn that truncated playlists are becoming the trend among smaller AM radio stations hoping to emulate their bigger brothers.

Secondary radio outlets, that is stations in smaller cities comprising the spinal cord, but not the nerve center of Middle America, are now trimming back the lists of songs aired in their broadcasts to less than 30 hits. They seem to be following the lead of New York radio stations, leaders of the AM pack, which boast playlists denser than granite, often playing as few as 13 songs and those strictly singles with proven track records.

Hit singles are established through a break with a smaller station willing to give it a spin. If listeners like what they hear, the songs could "break out" as national hits.

With all the jr. varsity Top 40 stations duplicating Big Broer's exclusive tastes, where do the smaller ones expect to draw their steady diet of undiscovered hits from?

Record company salesmen who promote unknown artists at smaller stations are understandably dismayed. Some stations must serve as testing grounds. Without them, we can only expect the current crop of Top 40 Brahmins to continue their domination of the charts while new artists go begging.

The method used by radio program directors these days to select what goes and what doesn't could teach Dr. Pavlov a few things about conditioned response.

Hard as it is to fathom, even Elton John needed a break once upon a time.

Fair Dinkum: After 10 years of amusing appreciators of the absurd and outraging music lovers, head Mother Frank Zappa finally wrapped his fingers around two gold albums for sales exceeding 500,000. The gilt-edged achievement was established in Australia where the Mothers of Invention are now just another band from Down Under . . . There's Always Room for Lemongello: Supper club singer Peter Lemongello taught the record industry that an artist can cut it without their official imprimatur. Lemongello (rhymes with lemongello), after being turned down by a few major record labels, refused to surrender. He bought time on several New York area TV stations to take his case directly to the people, pitching his double album to consumers for $6.98 through a mail order house. He's done so well he curried enough interest to command a performance at Gotham's prestigious Lincoln Center.

"Butterfly Ball" has enchanted such a motley group of readers one can expect to find among them as many people infatuated with Winnie the Pooh as mesmerized by the Teachings of Don Juan.

The allegorical tale, based on a children's book written in 1807, combines the rich imagery of Milne with the epistemology of Milton and has appeared prominently on best-selling books lists in Britain and the United States.

Equally remarkable was who the author, Alan Aldridge, chose to put the book to music—a former heavy metal kid who shed his armor to prove himself quite capable of more than rock-kitty bop and smoke bombs—Roger Glover, ex-bassist for Deep Purple.

"Butterfly Ball, as a music concept, was intended to serve as a stepping stone between the book and a film that is now in planning," Glover explained recently in New York. "I was told to make the album very commercial."

Describing the colorful book as not written just for kids or adults but for all ages, Glover said he conceived the album's songs after studying the book's 23 distinctive illustrations.

"I used the pictures to create an atmosphere for the album. A problem with that, though, is that all the pieces are descriptive—there's very little plot to any of them even though I tried to apply all the stories of animals and insects to the human condition," he explains.

"Whenever a particular illustration grabbed my eye, I wrote a song about it. I would have liked to have more of the songs to be tongue-in-cheek but that isn't always possible. Often I had to just hint at some of the book's messages or completely gloss over others," he says.

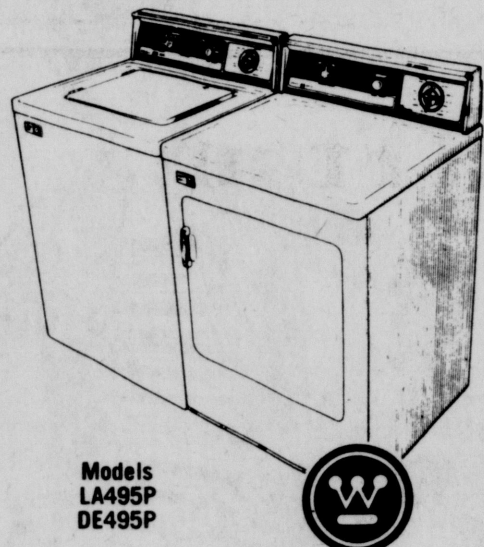

"Butterfly Ball wasn't my lifework, though," he reflects. "The book's producers wanted an album that summed up the book's entire attitude. I was hoping the album could stand on its own."

 "A good neighbor since 1907"

Illinois has its share of oddly named places

By F. NICHOLAS D'ALESSIO
Associated Press Writer
Just for the record, you can't go to HELL in Illinois, but you have your choice of Edens. One is near Peoria, while the other is in Randolph County.
Hell, of course—at least for toponymists (place-name devotees)—is in Michigan.
With two Philadelphias, Illinois beats Pennsylvania, while its three Brooklyns easily outnumber New York's. Even the largest Brooklyn, Ill., though, a town of some 1,000 persons just north of East St. Louis, doesn't quite measure up to New York's "Borough of Churches." Illinois towns range from Alpha in Henry County to Omega in Marion, from White Pigeon to Golden Eagle, from St. Mary to Herod and from Oblong to Crescent.

In their own way, they provide the historian with small clues to the origins, occupations and aspirations of the settlers who pushed their way across the Midwest in the 19th Century. Many also hint at a rough—but nonetheless genuine—sense of humor.

The Chicago area, aside from the pairing of Romeoville and Joliet, doesn't offer much of interest to the seeker of odd names. The names are more interesting in the country towns. National origins play a strong part in a nation of immigrants, so town names often reflect nostalgia for the "Old Country" and its heroes.

One only needs to glance at the map to know that some areas of Illinois were settled by Scandinavians. Names like Norway, Stavanger and Swedona leap out at the eye. Two towns in the state are named Bernadotte, after the French Marshal who became King of Sweden in Napoleonic times.

In other areas, names like Berlin, Hamburg, Vienna and Bismarck hint at German settlement. Glasgow, Winchester and Manchester tell of British origins.

Those of French extraction, though, may object to Frog-town.
Since many Illinois settlers came from New England and upstate New York through Ohio, it is not surprising that many names are echoes from those areas. Utica, Elmira, New Haven, Cleveland and Marblehead, among others.

Then there are the towns named after famous European, Asian and South American cities—Brussels, Marseilles, Milan, Canton, Pekin, Shanghai, New Delhi and Rio—and the villages named in honor of presidents, philosophers, poets and military heroes.

In Egypt, an area of Southern Illinois, the comparison of the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers with the Nile produced such names as Cairo, Thebes and Karnak.

Some of the saddest names are those reflecting the high, but unfulfilled ambitions the founders had for their prairie settlements. Metropolis isn't even a large town. The state's several Romes are only villages. And Illinois City doesn't even have its population listed on the official roadmap. Future City is mostly a collection of bars and motels.

Religion plays an important part in the names on the map. There's a Bible Grove, a Bishop, a Stone Church, Madonna-ville and Assumption.

Saints' names range from Peter to Tibory, with St. Elmo having two villages dedicated to him. The Norse gods get their own with Odin.

Other names reflect occupations of early settlers. Most, of course, are agricultural—Farmer City, Haypress, Horseshoe, Fruit, Meadows and Farina. There's an Oilfield, though, and such places as Galena, Carbon Cliff, Coal City and Mineral represent the state's mining activities. Weir and Fishhook tell of another pioneer occupation. Patriotism undoubtedly inspired Liberty, Union and Independence, while other high ideals are hinted at in Equality, Fidelity and Industry.

Some names express optimism: Good Hope, Joy, Ideal, Triumph, Sunbeam, Lively Grove and Golden. Others, such as Muddy, Blood and Kick aren't quite so rosy. Mediocrity even gets its say with Standard, while Risk may be a realistic assessment of the chances for agricultural prosperity.

Some names, though, are hard—or even impossible—to figure out. Inclose and Preemption are examples.

Opiem seems to be a mistake in spelling. Another popular depressant may have something to do with the name of Bourbon. Perdeville could be a misspelling of the Indiana university or an expression of disgust by a French-speaking settler with his remote, Ford County location. In reality it's probably a family name.

A few names seem to prefigure modern word usage in often ironic ways. There is no newspaper in Media, Loran has nothing to do with LONG RAnge Navigation, and the Bump and the Latin Hustle probably are unknown in tiny Disco. One also wonders how permanent a settlement the founders of Sublette intended to establish.

Since Aroma Park gets its breeze off the industrial areas of Kankakee, it's tempting to think of its name as an early air-pollution protest.

From there on, with such towns as Boody, Bungay, Buncombe, and Bulpitt, silliness can't help taking over even the serious toponymist. The temptations are just too numerous.

—Illinois students can go to Harvard, Yale, West Point or Annapolis without leaving the state. The same goes for a divorce-minded woman who wants to go to Reno. While she's there, by the way, she may as well return to Sorento, since it's in the same county.

—Crisp is near the Skillet River.

—Though baseball, football and basketball are the big American sports, Illinois has only Rugby and Polo.

—If Dionne Warwick asked someone in Tazewell County the way to San Jose, they'd probably tell her it was just south of the county line on the road past Winkler Winkler. She'd have to pronounce it San Joe's, however.

All in all, the settlers' names have their charm. Right now the real estate men are busy thinking up bucolic, Bicentennial and French Provincial names for their suburban developments and condominiums.

The new names may be elegant, but not as refreshing as Apolkey, Mulkeytown, Yantisville and Funk's Grove.

Comeback by Illinois River may not last

HAVANA, Ill. (AP) — The Illinois River, once considered the nation's most productive inland fishery outside the Great Lakes, is making a resurgence but it's not one likely to last, according to a state agency which has studied the river for more than a century.

It's been a sad 100 years, too, for the Illinois Natural History Survey, which has watched a wilderness stripped of many of its backwater lakes, virtually all its aquatic vegetation and at least 90 per cent of its once-famous fish-producing capability. But there have been substantial more fish in the river in the past year and they are larger and healthier than before, concedes Dr. Richard E. Sparks, head of the survey's River Research Lab.

"There has been much excitement over the river making a comeback and the optimists are partly right but the pessimists are, too," Sparks said in an interview.

He said most of the improved fishing has been caused by higher than normal water levels—causing a dilution of pollution and better spawning conditions. As for the water being cleaner, Sparks said: "We may be

Sid Butler, member of the local Ducks Unlimited chapter, examines a print entitled "Canvasbacks at 6:03," donated to the group by artist Les Kouba. The print will be one of many items offered at the Ducks Unlimited fund-raising dinner March 24 at Emerald Hill Country Club. (Telephone Photo)

Limited edition art offered by Ducks Unlimited

The signed, limited edition art print of "Canvasbacks at 6:03" by nationally known wildlife artist, Les Kouba, of Minneapolis, Minn., was presented to the Rock River Valley Chapter of Ducks Unlimited by the artist. Kouba has designed two of the federal waterfowl stamps, more commonly known to hunters as the "Duck Stamp." This print, which has been on display at several localities, will be offered for auction at the DU fund-raising dinner, March 24, at Emerald Hill Country Club.

Additional art items to be auctioned include the art print "The Symphony of Autumn—Canada Geese," by Larry Toschik of Phoenix, Ariz. Toschik's work appears in the magazine Arizona Highways; he is DU artist of the year. Auctioneer Russell Schier will also be taking bids on a limited edition, six-inch-high solid-bronze sculpture of a "Jumping Mallard Drake," by the Rev. Robert Clark of Salinas, Calif. Decoy carvings, a duck-stamp plaque, and other art prints will also be auctioned to collectors at the dinner.

Gun enthusiasts will be interested in bidding on a Winchester DU Commemorative Model 12 pump shotgun. The Winchester Company manufactured 800 of these numbered "presentation" guns which can only be obtained through one of these DU special events.

A great deal of committee work and cooperation by local merchants and financial institutions has been done to provide approximately 100 door prizes valued at $1,500 as a further attraction for the event. Items to be given away by drawing will include two 12-gauge shotguns, one 110-volt arc welder, one shop vacuum, a mechanical clay-target trap, one trolling motor, power tools, decanters, hams, decoys, calls, shotgun shells.

Tony Dean, director of the Illinois Department of Conservation, will be present, as will E. J. "Buss" Ruffing, Field Operations Supervisor for Ducks Unlimited. Ruffing will give a short summary of DU's history and objectives.

All profits from the dinner and auction go to finance waterfowl-breeding habitat restoration in Canada. Approximately 80 per cent of all funds taken in are applied directly for this purpose by Ducks Unlimited.

Chairman of the Rock River Valley Chapter is Chuck Hage, who advises that tickets may be purchased from Delbert Long Sportsman in Dixon or Rasmussen Gun and Hobby Shop in Oregon or from any committee member. Any hunter or conservationist who enjoys seeing the geese and ducks in migration can give DU their support by attending the dinner.

2 boys caught

Two juvenile boys from Broadview Heights, Ohio, were taken into custody Wednesday night after being sought by Dixon Police and Lee County Sheriff's Deputies.

An off-duty deputy stopped a car when he noticed one of the youths, Christian McDaniels, 17, driving in an erratic manner. Before a ticket was issued, the pair drove away. Authorities were unable to apprehend them initially, but found their car stuck on a cement block at the city water treatment plant parking lot.

The boys fled on foot but were later spotted by Doris Topping at the Country Store. Topping called police who picked the youths up later and transported them to jail. McDaniels was charged with disobeying a stop sign.

Lee, Kane county burglaries linked

Lee County Sheriff's detectives, along with Kane County authorities, have uncovered evidence which they believe links nine break-ins in eastern Lee County with crimes committed in Kane County the same day.

"Methods of operation in all the crimes were the same," said Raymond Nehring, sheriff of Lee County. Nehring added that fingerprints and car-tire tracks taken from all the homes entered were being compared.

In each case homes were entered when occupants were gone. Money and valuable items were taken and other possessions were extensively damaged. Authorities have found that four other homes in DeKalb County were also broken into on the same day. The path the burglars took has been traced from Kane County through DeKalb County, into Lee County on U.S. 30, then north to Rochelle on U.S. 51.

Richard E. Seyster called police after his son reportedly broke out a door window at their home and created a disturbance inside the residence.

The son was released on bond at the Public Safety Building and scheduled to appear in court March 19.

Howlett blames Walker for state lag

By The Associated Press
Democratic challenger Michael J. Howlett has laid part of the responsibility for Illinois' economic lag and high unemployment at the doorstep of Gov. Daniel Walker and pledged to reverse the trend if he is elected governor.

Howlett, speaking Wednesday at a meeting with 2,000 of Chicago's wealthiest businessmen, said he would create a permanent committee of top officials to help reverse the state's economy.

"Before this administration, Illinois unemployment was always lower than the national average. Today our unemployment rate is higher and we are losing jobs faster," Howlett said.

"The Illinois economy has been sliding downhill for three years while the state administration has put the blame on Washington," Howlett said. He told the businessmen that the state "can avoid a state tax increase" by expanding plants, businesses and industries and bringing back more jobs. Howlett says the state needs active, resourceful leadership to replace Gov. Walker's "fragmented" approach.

Walker heard Howlett's charges over the radio between campaign hops downstate.

"The next thing we know, Howlett will be holding me responsible for not ending the Vietnam war," Walker said. The governor asked where Howlett was when Walker proposed an accelerated building program for the state to spur the economy.

"His voice was absent," Walker noted, claiming that Illinois' economy is tied to the national economy and will recover as the country's economy does, but at a slower rate.

Earlier in the day, Gov. Walker said he was "puzzled" by charges of mudslinging leveled at him by Howlett.

"I have examined what I have said during the course of this campaign and I don't consider it mudslinging," Walker told reporters during a campaign hop to Aurora that marked the beginning of a two-day Downstate swing that took him to the Quad Cities Wednesday and to Danville today.

Walker was referring to Howlett's characterization of him Tuesday as a "bum" who operates a dirt-sweeping "jalopy." Howlett criticized Walker for allegedly trying to tarnish the reputation of his family.

Walker said he had never uttered "one word about Mike Howlett's family. He has a fine family."

Walker's son, Dan Jr., got into the act, issuing a statement that "enough is enough." "Last month he called him (Walker) an S.O.B....I think the secretary of state now owes the entire Walker family an apology," Dan Jr. said. Howlett apologized for the S.O.B. statement which he said he did not realize he had uttered.

Walker also said he has no intention of giving back the political donation Howlett made to help pay Walker's campaign debts.

Howlett said he couldn't remember giving Walker any money, but that the governor ought to give it back. And he pleaded "temporary insanity" for making the donation in the first place.

"I think Howlett again is trying to be funny," Walker said. "He gave the money in good faith and I accepted it in good faith....I don't see any reason to give it back."

While Walker was in Danville getting ready for another day, Howlett Wednesday night appeared at a packed ward rally in Mayor Richard J. Daley's Bridgeport neighborhood. Daley urged the crowd to

"redouble your efforts" and praised Howlett as a man who "knows the problems of our neighborhood and every neighborhood in the state of Illinois."

In the race for the Democratic nomination for attorney general, Ronald E. Stacker demanded Wednesday that his primary opponent, Senate President Cecil A. Partee of Chicago, declare that he would give up his private law practice if elected.

Stacker said Partee "must tell the voters of Illinois" whether he intends to continue his active business partnerships, his job on the Chicago Board of Zoning Appeals and his position as 20th Ward committeeman.

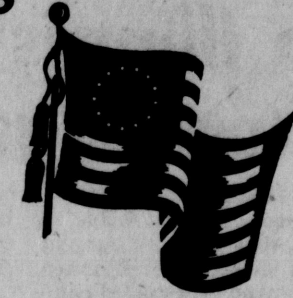

A spokesman for Partee said "the senator is not responding to any demands," but he added that "the senator could not practice law and be attorney general."

Did She, Or Didn't She?

As the story goes, a committee led by George Washington approached seamstress Betsy Ross in June, 1776, to ask her to sew the first "stars and stripes" American flag. But many historians believe that this story is little more than a Ross family tradition. On March 14, 1870, Betsy Ross's grandson, William J. Canby, read a paper to the Pennsylvania Historical Society that told the story as it had been dictated to him by his grandmother. The Ross family story also claimed that Betsy urged Washington to use five-pointed stars, instead of the six-pointed stars he had put in the flag design.

DO YOU KNOW — How many stars and stripes does the U.S. flag have today?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — The word "telephone" comes from the Greek words for "sound from afar."

Work of area man praised by honesty group

Patrick Quinn, secretary-treasurer of the Coalition for Political Honesty, has thanked John Bonnell, Rt. 2, Woodland Shores, Dixon, for work on the Political Honesty Initiative.

"Bonnell is an outstanding example of the type of concerned citizen who is making our petition drive successful throughout Illinois. He is a credit to the community," said Quinn.

Bonnell and the Coalition for Political Honesty are passing petitions to place the Initiative's three constitutional amendments on the November ballot. Those amendments would —keep legislators from drawing their entire annual salary of $20,000 on their first day in office;

—outlaw "double-dipping," the common practice of legislators holding two or more public payroll jobs;

—prohibit legislators from voting on bills in which they have a personal or financial "conflict-of-interest."

Quinn said the coalition must gather 375,000 signatures by May 1.

"Thanks to Bonnell, the Dixon area has contributed its share. But we still have a long way to go," he added.

Other Dixon area citizens helping pass petitions are: Mel Murphy, Dixon, Mrs. Fred Kessel, New Landing, Dixon, George Swanson, Dixon, Mrs. Betty Weigle, Dixon.

Austrian ex-Nazi chosen for Rotary president

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associate Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Rotary International has nominated as its next president an Austrian ex-Nazi despite protests against the move by Dutch Rotarians, an official of the worldwide service organization said Wednesday.

Dr. Wolfgang Wick, vice chairman of the board of directors of the Austro-American Magensite Co. in Radenthein, Austria, was the sole candidate picked earlier this year by an 11-member Rotary nominating committee.

Simon Wiesenthal, an Austrian Jew who since the end of World War II has made a career of hunting ex-Nazis in hiding, said Wick held an important economic post from 1938 until early 1945 in Austria.

Wiesenthal said Wick became a Nazi member in 1933, five years before the German occupation of Austria, and in February 1945 was called into the Waffen SS, the Nazi elite army corps, because of his position.

The New York Times carried a similar report in its Thursday editions.

Wiesenthal also said that Wick spent more than a year in a British internment camp in Austria after the war.

The governors of the 8,000 Rotarians in the Netherlands issued a formal protest against the nomination, as did Israeli Rotary officials, said Wiesenthal.

In a telephone interview Wednesday night in Chicago, where he is on a speaking tour, Wiesenthal said he knew of no war crimes that Wick allegedly might have committed. "It is not my business. He didn't commit any crimes. People only ask me if he was a Nazi."

"I have no knowledge about any crimes. I don't know ... and I don't look for it."

Harry A. Stewart, general secretary of Rotary International at its Evanston headquarters in suburban Chicago, said Wick "resigned the nomination for personal reasons as he stated it," after a protest by the Netherlands Rotarians. The nominating committee, however, comprised of persons from six regions of the world, once again chose him.

Under Rotary rules, any of the 16,705 chapters worldwide may place in nomination any other qualified nominee before an April 16 deadline. But if no other candidate is proffered, after a 10-day withdrawal period, Wick automatically would be elected at the organization's June 13 convention in New Orleans to serve from July 1977 through June 1978.

Stewart said Rotary International has not issued any statement over Wick's alleged affiliation nor is one intended.

"As to whether or not Mr. Wick has issued a statement, I don't know," he said.

There are an estimated 775,000 Rotarians throughout the world.

Wiesenthal said Wick, now vice chairman of the board of directors of the Austro-American Magensite Co., a magnesium firm, in Radenthein, Austria, met with Rotarians in Holland in mid-February after Dutch news reports revealed he had been a Nazi. He then withdrew his nomination but was renominated.

"During the Nazi period the Rotary was a forbidden organization. From the moral point of view a member of the Nazi party — and the Nazi party was condemned at Nuremberg — cannot be a president of the Rotary."

Wiesenthal said that when Wick was in Holland "he apologized to the Rotarians" about why he had joined the SS.

"The Dutch people don't wish to forget. Many, many Dutch members of the Rotary have said they will leave the Rotary when he is president."

16 pct. of those under 30 years old are overweight

By JOYCE MILLER
Dietitian, KSB Hospital

Sixteen per cent of the American population less than 30 years of age are obese and consequently more accident prone and are surgical risks.

Re-education is needed in the art of learning to live with food, to learn that there are other pleasures in life besides eating. Pleasure can be the satisfied feeling one gets when they glance in the store window as they walk by and are happy with the reflection or it is being able to wear a swimming suit in the summer at the beach and not staying in the water so people can't see the ripples and bulges.

Re-education is needed in learning to select the proper foods. A food's standing as a delicacy is related to its caloric count, that is why an adult as well as a child prefers a slice of chocolate cake at 400 calories to a serving of carrots at 40.

Learning the caloric value of foods eaten and controlling calories is the only way to lose weight. Developing new food habits and learning to live with them is the answer to the No. 1 nutritional problem in America today, obesity.

Three sample lunches of different caloric values:
3-oz. hamburger on bun 365
20 french fries 2x 1/2x 1/2 300
Apple pie 1/4 and 1/2 cup ice cream 450
Carbonated cola drink 105
Total Calories 1220
3-oz. hamburger (no bun) 245
Tossed salad with 1 table-spoon french dressing 75
Fresh apple 2 1/2" diameter 80
Skim milk, 1 cup 85
Total Calories 500

Chef's salad:
Lettuce, Celery, Radishes 15
Julienned ham, 1 oz. 75
Swiss cheese, 1 oz. 100
Hard-cooked egg 20
2 slices Blue cheese, 1 1/2 oz. 150
Hot dinner roll, 1 150
Margarine, 1 teaspoon 30
Sherbet, 1/2 cup 118
Coffee with 1 table-spoon cream 68
Total Calories 638

Important points to remember when developing new eating habits:
1. Use lemon juice or vinegar for salad dressings.
2. All meat, fish and poultry should be broiled, baked or roasted without added fat.

3. All visible fat and skin should be removed before eating.

4. Exclude gravies and sauces.

5. Soups should be of the clear-broth types with visible fat skimmed off.

6. Use herbs and seasonings to enhance flavors. Such as pepper, paprika, vinegar, parsley, mustard, rosemary, oregano.

7. Vegetables should be eaten raw or with lemon juice or herbs rather than butter, oils and sauces.

8. Fruits should be eaten raw, packed in their own juices, lightly rinsed or packed without sugar.

9. Low-calorie beverages can be taken occasionally, no sweetened carbonated drinks.

10. Skim milk should be used instead of two per cent or whole milk.

11. Drink four to six cups water daily.

12. Exercise! The more calories burned off in physical activity, the greater the weight loss and the development of better muscle tone.

Forum on alcoholism scheduled

A forum on alcoholism dealing with the topic "How the Cover-up Hurts the Alcoholic" will be held at 7:30 p.m., Monday, in Room 2K2 at Sauk Valley College.

Richard Holtam, coordinator of Human Services-Public Services, said this forum will deal with persons who "cover-up" for the alcoholic. The discussion will show why the family, the employer, the law, the clergy, the doctor and the judge are often in some ways responsible for the "cover-up."

Leading the discussion at the forum will be Victor Dykema of Lyndon. Further information may be obtained by contacting Holtam at the college.

Shriver looks to Illinois for encouragement

By JOSEPH R. TYBOR
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — Sargent Shriver knows the prescription to help mend his crippled campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination. He just can't get it filled.

Shriver, after disappointing showings in the New England primaries, is looking toward Illinois' presidential preference primary contest next Tuesday to revive a campaign that observers say may be breathing its last.

To ensure a good showing, he had hoped for the endorsement of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley. So far he hasn't received it and it doesn't appear he will.

So Shriver, his campaign in debt, will have to go at it alone in his attempt to beat the three other contenders in the "beauty contest"—George Wallace, Jimmy Carter and Fred Harris.

What effect a win in Illinois would have on his campaign is hard to say, but failure would just about put him out of the picture. Shriver virtually conceded that at a news conference at the start of his heavy campaign schedule in the state March 4, saying it could end his "active candidacy."

Shriver already has forfeited the delegate races in the Illinois primary and can't afford a poor showing in the preferential contest. He only has 19 delegates running committed to him, the fewest of the four candidates running in the preferential races and far below the 155 candidates that will be elected in the primary.

Shriver's campaign clearly was hurting when it limped into Illinois.

He has virtually no money to spend after his campaign coffers were depleted in the Massachusetts primary, a contest in which he finished sixth in a field of nine, even though he is associated with the Kennedy mystique through his marriage to Eunice, the sister of Sen. Edward Kennedy.

In New Hampshire, Shriver finished fifth among the five major candidates.

Shriver will spend a total of only about $5,000 in Illinois. His paid staff consists of one part-time public relations person who has no previous campaign experience. He already has closed his Washington headquarters.

There is no money to run a media campaign or to conduct mailings.

At one point, he considered dropping out of the Illinois race but now, apparently, he will stick it out.

He began intensive campaigning in the state March 4 and except for a few days out, plans to campaign every day until the primary March 16—the heaviest schedule of the candidates.

While not receiving Daley's personal endorsement, Shriver has received support from several of the mayor's ward committeemen and invitations to several regular organization functions, where his reception has been polite.

"I want your help," he said recently to a meeting of the Democratic Central Committee. "I need your help. With your help I can win in Illinois and go on to be the next President..."

Although Shriver sounds sometimes desperate in his pleas for support, saying he is the only other viable, progressive candidate for Illinois voters, the frontrunners in the Illinois contest view his entry with apprehension.

A telephone poll conducted by an agency for the Chicago Sun-Times and WBBM-TV in Chicago showed that after the New Hampshire primary, 22.5 per cent of the Democrats polled preferred Shriver.

That was only slightly behind Carter, generally conceded to head the pack in Illinois. Carter captured 25.2 per cent of those polled. Wallace captured 17.2 per cent and Harris 7.9 per cent.

"The beauty contest is terribly important to us and our goal is to run first," said Jim Wall, Carter's coordinator in the state. "Going head-to-head against Wallace, we're confident of winning."

"But Shriver's vote-getting ability is fairly good. Surprisingly to us, his name recognition is greater than Carter's, terrifically so in the Chicago area. He's also very popular in the black community. All these things have me worried."

Shriver, 61, is no stranger to Illinoisans, especially to Chicago area voters and at one point early in the primary sweepstakes he was considered a good bet for the Daley organization to back.

He managed the Kennedy's Merchandise Mart in Chicago from 1948 to 1960 and was president of the Chicago Board of Education from 1955 to 1960 during Daley's first term as mayor.

One Daley insider said the reason for Daley's failure to endorse Shriver so far is the complicated ballot that Democratic voters will mark.

In addition to slates committed to the preferential candidates, Daley and his Democratic nemesis, Gov. Daniel Walker, are each running full slates of 155 delegates in the state's 24 congressional districts.

Daley's delegates are committed to Illinois Sen. Adlai Stevenson. Walker's delegates on the ballot are committed to him but Walker verbally has released them from that commitment.

Stevenson has called Wallace, Carter, Harris and Shriver "last-place candidates" and said the Democratic national convention is likely to be deadlocked.

That's what Daley apparently believes and he wants to be in a position to be a powerbroker in New York. To do that, a Democratic source said, Daley is concentrating on electing his slate of delegates and feels an endorsement in the preferential primary would only serve to confuse the voter.

Love is skin-deep. Give Blood.

Reagan needs campaign comeback

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
MIAMI (AP) — President Ford is rapidly deflating Ronald Reagan's Republican presidential bid, leaving his challenger in dire need of a comeback to pump it up again.

And Georgia's Jimmy Carter has climbed back atop the Democratic field with a victory that made a shambles of Gov. George C. Wallace's campaign.

So read Chapter Four, Florida's installment in the presidential primary election story. Now the test is in Illinois, next Tuesday.

Republican Reagan is far from finished, but he can't go on meeting Ford like this and losing, as he did in Florida Tuesday.

Yet he already is saying that he never considered Illinois one of his stronger states. The former California governor had better get to one soon if he is going to dislodge Ford.

Reagan insisted he is in the race to stay, until the day the delegate numbers guarantee Ford the GOP nomination. He said he does not think that will happen during the primary season and forecast a showdown at the Republican National Convention next August.

After all, Reagan said in Rock Island, Ill., Tuesday night, he has gained almost half the Republican vote in each of his two direct primary tests with Ford.

But almost half is losing, and he needs a win. Reagan can keep running by coming close, but if that becomes the pattern, his campaign will become a hollow exercise.

The Ford camp was talking about bandwagons and trains pulling out, the traditional language of winners trying to convince GOP politicians to climb aboard now because there might not be room later.

Alabama's Wallace was the big loser on the Democratic side. Four years ago, Florida was the scene of a major Wallace triumph, a 42 per cent presidential primary victory over the whole Democratic field.

This time Florida belonged to Carter, and that undercut Wallace's Southern political base. And it could be the beginning of the undoing of Wallace as a force in national Democratic politics.

Florida was Carter's third presidential primary win, with New Hampshire and Vermont. "I don't see anybody ahead of me now, but we still have 30 or 40 states left to go," the former Georgia governor said. He was heading for Chicago today, to campaign for next week's match against Wallace, former Oklahoma Sen. Fred R. Harris and Sargent Shriver.

Carter said he doesn't consider the Wallace campaign finished by Florida. But he also said that he doubts the Alabama governor will be a real factor in Democratic politics now.

Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington ran third among the Democrats, his Florida gamble a failure. He did, as he noted, gain about a quarter of the state's national convention delegates. But he failed in what clearly was an effort to block Carter's climb.

Nonetheless, Jackson claimed a good omen in his Miami area plurality, saying that is the kind of populous territory a Democrat must capture to win nomination and the White House. He called Florida no more than a way station and challenged Carter to the test of New York's April 6 primary.

"No one will win the Democratic nomination unless he can carry the big city, industrial areas of the country, and that's what I can do," said Jackson, who won last week in Massachusetts with 23 per cent of the vote. Carter ran fourth there.

With the Florida vote counted completed, this was the outcome:

Ford 318,844 or 53 per cent.
Reagan 282,618 or 47 per cent.
That translated to 43 national convention delegates for Ford, 23 for Reagan.

And among the Democrats: Carter 439,870 or 34 per cent.
Wallace 392,105 or 31 per cent.

Jackson 306,120 or 24 per cent.

Three per cent of the vote was cast in favor of sending uncommitted delegates to the Democratic convention, and that was more than any of the other nine candidates got.

Delegates were apportioned this way on the basis of statewide and congressional district showings: Carter 34, Wallace 26, Jackson 21.

Reagan claimed to have been delighted that he came close. But that was hard to sell in view of the optimistic forecasts once posted by his campaign manager, L.E. Thomas. "Two-thirds of the Republicans in Florida want Reagan," he had said early in the campaign. "I guess a campaign chairman shouldn't really be predicting such fantastic odds, but it's true."

If his figures were not prophetic, his comment about the risk of such a prediction was.

Thomas toned it down later, and Reagan disavowed it altogether. But it was on the record, to be measured against Reagan's election night statement:

"I have to tell you that we are all delighted on our side.... President Ford in these first couple of primaries has thrown the whole load at us, he has shot all the big artillery there is, used everything in the incumbency that he can, and we're still possessing almost half the Republican vote."

Ford said simply that he was overjoyed — and that it was not the time to answer questions about the possibility that Reagan might be forced from the race.

Among the other assessments and portents of Florida:

—Wallace, in Oak Park, Ill., said that while he would rather have won, he felt good about the outcome. "Florida is not exactly a so-called Southern state," he said.

Stockwell saves Sterling

By The Associated Press
Five of the seven ranked Class AA Illinois high school basketball teams that saw action in sectional playoff battles rolled to easy victories, but the other two won the kinds of games that give nightmares to coaches and fans alike.

Fifteenth-ranked Sterling stayed alive primarily because of the clutch play of guard Dave Stockwell, who scored 12 of his team's 16 points in two overtimes to give Sterling a 69-65 victory over LaSalle-Peru in one of Wednesday night's games.

Stockwell scored 30 points for the game, but L-P's Don Slusarek led all scorers with 35 in a losing effort.

Ninth-ranked Galesburg also had to struggle for its win, as Mike Campbell sank a free throw with five seconds to play for a 46-45 victory over Peoria Manual.

No. 3 Aurora West had little trouble disposing of Glenbard East 56-43, as Ron Hicks and Jay Bryant each tallied 14 points to show the way.

Marty Howard pumped in 29 points—half his team's total—as seventh-ranked Chicago Marist breezed past Downers Grove South 58-45, and Hubert Carter scored 25 points and set a school season scoring record of 564 as the senior guard led No. 13 Decatur Eisenhower to an 86-67 thrashing of Taylorville. Carter was one of five Eisenhower players who scored in double figures.

Eleventh-ranked Normal Community and 10th-ranked Joliet Central both displayed well-balanced offenses to crush their opponents.

Randy Smith poured in 30 points and Lance Jones added 21 to lead Normal Community past Bradley 84-58, while Joliet Central whipped Champaign Central 75-57 behind Mike Jones' 20 points, Darnell Anderson's 18 and Glenn Beatty's 16.

Edwardsville had to go into overtime to defeat Alton 70-69 behind Gary Reichman's hot fourth-quarter shooting. Reichman scored 13 of his 26 points in the final period.

Four of Hersey's five starters—topped by Tom Burzak's 28 points—scored in double figures to lead their team to an 85-70 triumph over Maine West, while Mike Stauski hit for 27 points as St. Laurence cruised by Mount Carmel 64-48.

Marion had no trouble downing Mount Vernon 81-57 behind Jim Orr's 30 points, and De LaSalle's Ray Rhone tallied 25 points as his team defeated Fenton 78-63.

In the other Class AA sectional battles Wednesday night, Rockford Gilford beat Fox Lake Grant 77-65, Conant defeated DeKalb 64-52 and North Chicago nipped Buffalo Grove 63-60.

In the semifinals of the Chicago Public League playoffs, Chicago Vocational thrashed Harrison 102-81 to earn the right to meet 14th-ranked Morgan Park in the championship. The winner of that game will advance to the Class AA championship finals at Champaign next week.

Class AA sectional play will continue Friday night and those winners will move on to super-sectional play en route to Champaign.

Sabres stun Penguins

By The Associated Press
If the Buffalo Sabres couldn't believe it, the Pittsburgh Penguins certainly couldn't.

"It's almost unbelievable what they did in those last few minutes," Buffalo goalie Al Smith said after his teammates erupted for five goals in the final nine minutes and nipped the Penguins 7-6 Wednesday night.

"I couldn't believe what I saw out there. What they did in those few minutes is unbelievable," echoed Lowell MacDonald, one of the shell-shocked Penguins.

Actually, the Penguins outdid the Sabres, scoring five goals in less than 6½ of the second period to take a seemingly comfortable 6-2 lead.

Garry Unger of St. Louis set an all-time National Hockey League record by playing in his 631st consecutive game as the Blues and Toronto Maple Leafs skated to a 2-2 tie. Elsewhere, the Montreal Canadiens trounced the Chicago Black Hawks 5-1, the Vancouver Canucks beat the Kansas City Scouts 3-1, the Atlanta Flames downed the Minnesota North Stars 4-1 and the California Seals edged the Detroit Red Wings 4-3.

Craig Ramsay touched off Buffalo's comeback at 11:25 of the final period, Jim Lorentz made it 6-4 just 19 seconds later and Rene Robert brought the Sabres within one goal at 12:38. Gil Perrault tied it at 15:05 and also scored the winner with just 21 seconds to go. Rick Kehoe scored three of Pittsburgh's second-period goals and MacDonald got the other two.

Canadiens 5, Black Hawks 1
Guy Lafleur registered his 44th goal and an assist and became the first NHL player to reach the 100-point mark this season. In recording their 50th success of the campaign, the Canadiens stretched their unbeaten streak to 11 games.

Canucks 3, Scouts 1
The Black Hawks also lost sole possession of first place in the Smythe Division, dropping into a tie with Vancouver. The Canucks turned back the Scouts on second-period goals by Rick Blight and Chris Oddleifson after Vancouver's Bobby Lalonde scored the tying goal with only two seconds left in the opening period.

Blues 2, Leafs 2
Despite Unger's consecutive game record and an assist on the first goal of the game by Jerry Butler, the Blues had to settle for a tie when Toronto's Dave Williams scored midway through the final period. Toronto's Errol Thompson netted his 39th goal of the season to tie the count just 13 seconds after Butler scored and Chuck Lefley put St. Louis back on top 29 seconds after that.

Flames 4, North Stars 1
Bill Flett triggered a three-goal flurry in the third period, slapping in a goal that broke a 1-1 tie at 4:20. The Flames then proceeded to wrap it up on goals Larry Romanchych and Eric Vail.

Jacobs bowls perfect game

John Jacobs rolled a perfect 300 game in league play Wednesday night at Plum Hollow Bowling Lanes. Jacobs is shown at left above checking out the score sheet with Marty Gearhart, manager of the bowling lanes. Jacobs was bowling with the Modern Woodmen Insurance Co. team in the Wednesday Night Classic League. He carries a 180 league average. The perfect score came in the opening game of the match with Hoyle Road Equipment. Jacobs rolled eight pocket strikes, carried the ninth strike on a Brooklyn hit, then rolled two more in the pocket for strikes. He said he wasn't nervous until he went for the 12th strike, admitting he had "rubber legs" at that point. The final ball hit on the nose, but the pins caved in for the strike, completing the perfect game. It was the second 300 in the history of Plum Hollow. Dennis Tittel had a 300 on March 26, 1973. May and Dantley head AP team

NEW YORK (AP) — Indiana's Scott May and Notre Dame's Adrian Dantley, two of the country's gold-plated forwards, were named to the 1976 Associated Press All-America basketball team today.

Joining the frontcourt stars on the first team are May's teammate at Indiana, center Kent Benson; Phil Sellers, the brilliant Rutgers swingman, and Maryland guard John Lucas.

May, a 6-foot-7 senior, and Dantley, a 6-5 junior, were selected for the second straight year. The 6-4 Lucas was a second-team selection last season, while the 6-5 Sellers was on the third team and 6-11 Benson made honorable mention.

With 380 votes from the nation's sports writers and broadcasters, May was the high scorer on this year's team — nosing out Dantley by four. Behind Dantley's 376 were Lucas with 288, Sellers with 272 and Benson with 236.

The first team was a clear-cut choice above the AP's second team which included: forwards Richard Washington of UCLA and Mitch Kupchak of North Carolina, center Robert Parish of Centenary and guards Phil Ford of North Carolina and Ron Lee of Oregon.

On the third team were, forwards Bernard King of Tennessee, Terry Furlow of Michigan State, Kenny Carr of North Carolina State; center Leon Douglas of Alabama and guard-forward Earl Tatum of Marquette.

May and Dantley are the premier players from this year's college crop, according to pro observers.

Scouts describe the slick Indiana forward as "the complete player ... a clutch shooter ... a hard worker at both ends of the court." May scored close to 24 points a game while leading the Hoosiers to the Big Ten championship and an undefeated regular season.

Dantley, who applied as a hardship case for the pros but withdrew at the last minute last year, scored close to 29 points a game for the Irish. "Dantley can score from inside or outside," said a pro scout. "He's another Elgin Baylor ... an excellent offensive rebounder."

Benson was described as a "self-sacrificing, tremendously hard-working player." A supreme intimidator under the basket, the 235-pounder collected nine rebounds and 17 points a game. He had a high of 38 points against Michigan this season and came up with a basketful of game-saving plays for the Indiana team.

Lucas, a perfect pro-size guard, is the all-time Maryland scoring leader with an average that has hovered near the 20 mark since his sophomore season. According to pro observers, Lucas is "a great play-maker and shooter ... the top guard in the country ... exceptionally quick and a great penetrator."

Sellers was the heart of Rutgers' unbeaten season. A high-powered scoring machine in his earlier years, he became an all-around floor leader this season — averaging 20 points, 10 rebounds and a fistful of assists a game. He was known, especially, for his court savvy.

Today in History

By The Associated Press
Today is Thursday, March 11, the 71st day of 1976. There are 295 days left in the year.
Today's highlight in history:
On this date in 1861, the constitution of the Southern Confederacy was adopted at Montgomery, Ala.
On this date:
In 1810, Emperor Napoleon of France was married by proxy to Archduchess Marie Louise of Austria.
In 1845 the Maori natives in New Zealand were revolting against British rule.
In 1865, Union forces under General William Sherman occupied Fayetteville, N.C., during the Civil War.
In 1917, in World War I, British forces captured Baghdad.
In 1930, former President William Howard Taft was buried in Arlington National Cemetery outside Washington.
In 1942, early in World War II, General Douglas MacArthur left the Corregidor fortress in the Philippines by torpedo boat, en route to Australia.
Ten years ago: Mobs swept through Calcutta, India, and surrounding towns in the second day of food rioting, and police killed five persons.
Five years ago: Three persons were killed at Puerto Rico University in San Juan during rioting over the ROTC military program.
One year ago: Two planes of Portugal's air force attacked a military barracks in Lisbon, in what was called an attempt to overthrow the left-wing military government.
Today's birthday: New York Post Publisher Dorothy Schiff is 72.
Thought for today: I destroy my enemy when I make him my friend — President Abraham Lincoln, 1809-1865.
Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, the British Admiralty ordered a sloop to Cork, Ireland, to convey 44 transports loaded with seven infantry battalions to Canada to defend it against American invaders.

Variety of subjects for wiretaps

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women's libbers, Communists, militant blacks and Jews and taxpayers protesting against taxes were among the targets of domestic surveillance by government agencies, a Senate committee says.

The Senate intelligence committee released nearly 1,000 pages of documents Monday, detailing domestic FBI wiretap and surveillance operations and Internal Revenue Service undercover spying.

One memo shows the FBI used informers during 1969 and 1970 to keep track of the women's liberation movement in several U.S. cities, but never turned up any evidence of revolutionary or violent activity.

The panel said it found that informers were employed in New York, Baltimore, Kansas City, Mo., Columbia, Mo., and Lawrence, Kan.

But a May 1969 memo from the head of FBI offices in New York to the late Director J. Edgar Hoover said informers found the women's lib movement "is not an organization as such but rather a cause and philosophy" interested in such issues as birth control and abortion.

One informer told the FBI that members of the women's movement "are not revolutionaries and would not help anyone in a revolution until the oppression of women was solved first and completely," the memo said.

Committee documents also showed the IRS used undercover agents to monitor activities of tax protesters in Los Angeles and Chicago. One memo said an IRS undercover agent in Los Angeles gave the Justice Department advance information on the legal strategy planned by a protester facing trial for refusing to pay his taxes.

A memo describing activities of the "undercover operative" said the agent had been able to obtain a copy of the tax protesters' legal brief several months before it was filed in court.

The memo said the advance data gave the IRS time to "do additional research in order for the U.S. attorney to properly answer this motion," which sought dismissal of one of the charges against the unidentified tax protester.

An undercover IRS agent was assigned to attend public meetings in Chicago of the Illinois Tax Rebellion Committee, a 1973 memo showed.

Another memo released by the panel outlined FBI wiretap activities against the Black Panthers, the Jewish Defense League and the Communist Party U.S.A. The memo is believed to provide the first authoritative list of domestic groups and individuals subjected to electronic surveillance by the FBI.

The memo said seven wiretaps and an electronic bug were used against the Black Panthers.

Other targets were the Junta of Military Organizations, described as "a black extremist organization," the Worker Student Alliance, said to be an affiliate of the Students for a Democratic Society, and some individuals.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Grammy Award winner Natalie Cole says she plans to get married Aug. 1.

Miss Cole, daughter of the late singer Nat King Cole, said Tuesday she will marry Kevin Nance of Brooklyn, N.Y., a keyboard player in her band.

Miss Cole was selected the best rhythm and blues female singer and the best new female artist at the Grammy presentations.

She made the announcement on the Mike Douglas show.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Ryan O'Neal has been ordered to see a psychiatrist for six months of drug counseling as a means of settling his case for marijuana possession, court spokesmen said.

O'Neal, 34, the star of such movies as "Barry Lyndon," "Paper Moon" and "Love Story," was booked last January for investigation of possessing five ounces of marijuana.

He was ordered Tuesday to report back to Municipal Court on Sept. 8 to see whether he has satisfactorily completed the counseling.

Police narcotics officers entered O'Neal's Bel-Air home Jan. 7 with a search warrant and found the marijuana in a large jar in a bedroom closet.

FOLSOM, Calif. (AP) — Convicted mass murderer Charles Manson has been transferred from San Quentin to Folsom's lockup unit where prisoners are housed in individual cells and have less freedom of movement than inmates in the "mainline population," a prison spokesman said.

The move was asked on Manson's age — he is 40 — and the fact that one section at San Quentin has been shut down, the spokesman said.

Manson was first taken to San Quentin in 1971 after his conviction of first-degree murder in the slayings of actress Sharon Tate and six others.

King Hussein and Queen Alia of Jordan arrived in Tokyo today on a week-long state visit for which police authorities have assigned an undisclosed number of security officers to deal with possible Arab and Japanese radical moves against the visit.

No incident was reported when Hussein's plane landed at Tokyo's Haneda airport. A 21-gun salute and national anthems of Jordan and Japan greeted the king and queen when they debarked.

The king and his retinue proceeded in a motorcade to the state guest house where they were welcomed by Emperor Hirohito and Empress Nagako and other members of the imperial family and by Prime Minister Takeo Miki and his wife.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Duke of Edinburgh, the Queen's husband, will act as patron of one of the major British contributions to the American Bicentennial, the British Ambassador to the United States, Sir Peter Ramsbotham, has announced.

There has been extensive speculation that the Duke will escort First Lady Betty Ford to the opening performance on July 6 by the Scottish Military Tattoo at Wolf Trap Farm park for the performing arts in near-by Vienna, Va.

ITALY MARKS "WOMAN'S DAY" — Dressed in long black robes after the prevailing style of Sicilian women, women of Rome, Italy, pull float on which stands effigy representing the Italian male. Art Carney in SVC film event

Paul Mazursky's academy award winning film, "Harry & Tonto," starring Art Carney, will be shown by the Sauk Valley College Film Commission at 7:30 p.m., on Saturday, in the Little Theatre at the college.

This often hilarious film chronicles the odyssey of a 72 year-old retiree and his cat, Tonto, across America.

SVC students will pay 50 cents for admission, while non-students will be charged $1. Harry & Tonto is rated "R."

Thoughts for today

Trust in the Lord with all your heart, and do not rely on your own insight. In all your ways acknowledge him, and he will make straight your paths. —Proverbs 3:5,6.

"Resignation and faith behold God in the smallest hair that falls; and the happiest life is that of him who has bound together all the affairs of life, great and small, and entrusted them to God." —John W. Alexander, American painter.

Demuzio takes case to voters

By SKIP WOLLENBERG
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — "I haven't wasted much time on politicians in this campaign. I have taken my case directly to the streets," the candidate said.

The comment wasn't made by a Jerry Rubin or another 1960's style radical.

It was state Sen. Vince Demuzio, a serious-minded freshman legislator from Carlinville who is running against state Treasurer Alan Dixon of Belleville for the Democratic nomination for secretary of state. Demuzio, who has Gov. Daniel Walker's backing, and Dixon, with the support of the regular party organization, square off March 16.

The winner will compete in the general election with Senate Republican leader William C. Harris, 54, of Pontiac who is unopposed in the GOP primary. The 48-year-old Dixon has held public office all of his adult life, winning his first election at age 21 as police magistrate in Belleville. Demuzio won election to a four-year state Senate term in his first try for office in 1974.

"Dixon hasn't been in many of the areas I've been in," says the 34-year-old former secretary of state's investigator, "and while he may have better name recognition with the politicians, he isn't any better known than I am among the people on the street."

Demuzio said he went quail hunting with Walker on the day Dixon was slated for secretary of state by Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley and other party leaders in Chicago.

"I told the governor I was thinking about running for a state office, and he told me I couldn't run if I didn't file nominating papers," Demuzio said. Demuzio has criticized Dixon for indecision. Dixon launched a campaign for the party's nomination for governor last fall, but stepped aside for Secretary of State Michael Howlett.

Demuzio has attempted to cast Dixon as a puppet of Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley for the decision.

But Dixon said he deferred because Howlett has been a state official longer than he has and because a three-way race for the nomination would have been impractical.

Howlett has served 15 years in statewide office and Dixon for five after 20 years in the state legislature.

The secretary of state's office is regarded as the second best job in state government, however. It controls nearly 4,000 jobs and as chief dispenser of vehicle license plates, affords the officeholder a measure of public visibility.

Neither man is risking his current job in the contest since each has two more years remaining in their current terms. Demuzio stirred up some excitement which has lasted through his campaign when he wrote in a questionnaire for the Independent Voters of Illinois that "the office of secretary of state has been used by machine politicians as a haven for political patronage without regard to the competency of persons being hired."

Dixon aides responded by noting that five of Demuzio's relatives — his father, his mother and three sisters — work for the state.

Demuzio says only one sister has been added to the state payroll since he was elected to the state Senate, and that all five relatives were hired on merit rather than handed their jobs as patronage rewards.

"It's the same old tradition of attacking a man's family rather than attacking the man," Demuzio says. "I think that kind of talk has been helpful to me — people don't appreciate these kinds of attacks."

Dixon, who got the IVI endorsement, says he has tried to ignore Demuzio in his campaign, stressing rather what he says has been a good performance in the state treasurer's job.

Both candidates have disclosed their personal incomes — Dixon has a net financial worth of $411,038 and Demuzio $42,050.

Dixon's chief campaign committee reported to the state Elections Board it collected $126,000 in contributions between July 1, 1975 and Feb. 15 and had $50,000 carried over from before the reporting period.

Two committees backing Demuzio, meanwhile, reported contributions of only $26,296 by Feb. 15.

Dixon aides say he will spend between $100,000 and $110,000 on the primary election while Demuzio advisers say they hope to collect enough to spend $60,000.

The two men tend to agree on some issues which the secretary of state's office has some say in.

They both support collective bargaining for employees in the office, adoption of no-fault automobile insurance with a limit on the right to sue for damages, photos on driver's licenses and photo identification cards for persons without driver's licenses.

Demuzio has criticized Dixon's record of minority hiring in the state treasurer's office, where there are only six blacks out of 89 employees and only one woman out of the 14 who are making salaries of $15,000 or more.

Dixon has said he has tried to recruit more blacks and says his minority hiring record is better than that of any other state treasurer.

The two men also have differed on the proposed constitutional amendments which are being sponsored by a group called the Coalition for Political Honesty.

The three amendments would prohibit legislators from taking their salaries in advance, holding a second government job and from voting on issues in which they have a personal, family or financial conflict of interest. Demuzio supports the amendments, saying if the legislature cannot reform itself, citizens should do so.

Dixon says he supports the goals of the amendments, but thinks they should be enacted by legislation rather than added to the constitution.
